Exasperated by the impossible situation in which he finds himself, Eversleigh returns to London with the idea of resuming his bachelor life, but "Trixie," who has grown fond of him and is cooling toward the absent Falandres, arrives and embarasses him with endearments, which bound by his agreement he cannot honorably him with endearments, which bound by his agreement he cannot honorably accept. The difficulty is removed by the arrival of Falandres, who has married while in Morocco.

The play ends with "Trixie" becoming Eversleigh's wife in fact as well as in appearance.

Miss McGrane will appear in the role of "Trixie" made famous by Billie Burke, and Mr. Lynch will have the part created by John Drew. They will be supported by all the stock favorites including Diana Dewar, Grace Dale, Carrie Lowe, Alice Mayel, Hollister Pratt, James L. O'Neill, Jack Garrett, Norbert Kessler, Thomas Fadden and others.

"My Wife" will be presented by the Lynch Players during the entire week except Tuesday. Matinces will be an Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Thursday matinee is a special Thanksgiving matinee.

"High Jinks."

It is not that Miss Mary Ambrose is setting her opinions against those of men playwrights, understand. Of course, there is nothing so funny as falling down hard, except getting up again and falling down still harder. This and other traditions held secred by the stage comedian are entirely safe from attack by Miss Ambrose, who is to be seen here in Arthur Hammerstein's musical jollity. "High Jinks," on Tuesday matince and alght, November 23. Her comments on comedy are altogether constructive.

"If a man thinks a thing is funny, then it is funny for him. Let him laugh. Only I want the women to have a chance to laugh, too. Authorid do not give them much opportunity, as a rule," said Miss Ambrose. "Personsible for the fact that authors, as a rule, do not write strong comedy parts for women. I do not know, really. But I do know that when a good part is written for a woman, she

Wife."

The plot follows:

Beatrice Dupre, the ward of Gerald
Eversleigh, who is 42 years old, is ordered to marry a man she detests, her affections being given to a certain youthful, Rene Falandres whom M. Dupre looks upon with unfriendly eyes. As "Trixie's" inheritance of a large fortune depends upon her mar-

A real Thanksgiving treat is promised at the Orpheum in Kansas City in the new bill which starts Sunday. First in importance is "Home Again," a miniature musical comedy in which the four Marx brothers have the principal roles. There are fifteen people in the company. A novel attraction is promised in Kajiwama, a clever Japanese man who writes upside down, back-ward, with both hands and every oth-

At the Orpheum.

"The Cowardly Way," with Florence Reed as the star, will be the next release on the Equitable program at the Orpheum theater, being scheduled for production on Monday and Tuesday. This five-act photoplay deals with a question which has vexed mankind ever since any consideration has been given to the problems of life and death, and combines the psychological imagination of the author, Marc Edmond Jones, with the powerful dramatic ability of the star, in such a "Chi Chi," "Not Now, But Later," man who writes upside down, backward, with both hands and every other conceivable way. The funny Frank Milton and the clever De Lond sisters return in a new offering entitled "The Terminal." The new vehicle gives the trio plenty of opportunity to elicit plenty of laughter.

The Harmony Trio, consisting of Billy Galet, Dave Harris and Charles Morey, are masters in the art of musical blend. Nina Payne and Joe Niemeyer offer an up-to-the-minute noveity consisting of dancing and specially written songs. Ripifax and Panlo, two English pantomimists, are two flexible eccentrics who mingle comedy with dexterous feats. Lohes and Sterling appear in fast and furious athletic feats. Miss Sterling was awarded the 1915 Physical Culture magazine medal as the most perfect physical specimen of a woman in America. The Orpheum travel weekly which completes the bill, will depict scenes of Tahita in the south Pacific. Lake Windemere in the north of England, and views along the rocky coast of Latium, Italy.

Statement From Players.

You probably know by this time that we have a first class permanent stock company at the Grand. Per-Mary Ambrose and Whitlock Davis Coming Here in "High Jinks."

Fying before she is eighteen, which she will be in two months, matters are urgent especially as Falandres is suddenly called to Morocco. So she proposes to Gerald that he shall contract with her a "marriage in name only." After a convenient time they are to obtain a divorce, when she will be at liberty to marry Falandres. With great reluctance Eversleigh consents, and in the second act we find the happy pair staying at a Swiss hotel. A French "lady-killer" called M. Valbourne, makes love to Triske in romantic strain; but she gives him no encouragement. A certain Baronses Granclos, finds a letter from Rene to Mrs. Eversleigh full of the most ardent protestations. Emboldened by the discovery, Valbourne attempts to embrace her, but is repulsed with indignation. Eversleigh full of the most ardent protestations.
